Government Leaders from Across the Aisle Come Together to Release Moneyball for Government Book

New Book Makes the Case for Investing in What Works and Provides Roadmap for Bipartisan Cooperation to Help Young People, Families and Communities

WASHINGTON – Results for America announced today that a bipartisan group of current and former federal government leaders and advisors will be releasing a new book, titled *Moneyball for Government*, which encourages government to change how it works so that data, evidence and evaluation drive policy and funding decisions. The new book will be released on November 11, but orders can be placed online through Amazon starting today.

The book includes jointly-written chapters by former Obama and George W. Bush administration Budget Directors Peter Orszag and Jim Nussle, U.S. Senators Kelly Ayotte (R-NH) and Mark Warner (D-VA), former Obama and George W. Bush domestic policy advisors Melody Barnes and John Bridgeland; and former spokesmen for the Mitt Romney and Hillary Clinton presidential campaigns Kevin Madden and Howard Wolfson. It also includes chapters from former Obama and George W. Bush economic advisors Gene Sperling and Glenn Hubbard, and Obama and George W. Bush policy experts Robert Gordon and Ron Haskins.

“This book is about addressing our nation’s great challenges by getting better results with government investments. By shifting public resources toward solutions that use data and evidence of impact, we can improve the lives of young people, their families and communities,” said Michele Jolin, managing partner of Results for America. “By bringing together leading thinkers from across the political spectrum and highlighting what is working across the country, this book offers a way to open up new opportunities and to make dramatic progress in improving lives. We call upon government leaders at all levels - as well as presidential candidates from both parties - to support and implement the bipartisan ideas in this book.”

The book also features profiles of innovative government and non-profit leaders and organizations across the country that are successfully leveraging data, evidence, and evaluation to improve impact and get better results.
